

Friday Stories

A collection of stories that the author has personally experienced over the period of time from childhood to college graduation. Some of the stories involve friends who joined him in activities that could easily have gone the wrong way. He tells stories about his parents involvement in his life, some with surprising results. There was a spectacular time when he dated a girl who later made a number of Hollywood movies. His college education produced a few stories, but jobs during college made more of them. It is very much a book to learn from because the author makes sure to point out what he himself learned from a number of these activities, though he writes with a true sense of humor..
