

Streets of Gold

Masha, a young Russian girl, is terribly afraid of the czar, whose piercing eyes glare at her from the portrait Mashas parents must keep on the wall. In the last decade of the nineteenth century, the czars harsh anti-Semitic laws forbid Masha, who is Jewish, from going to school-something the bright, inquisitive girl desperately wishes to do. When her family immigrates to America, Masha not only achieves the long-desired education, but also gains success as a poet, and a love for her new country that will last all her life. In a picture book inspired by Mary Antins classic immigrant memoir The Promised Land, Rosemary Wells brings renewed vigor and freshness to a story of the fundamental American experience. Dan Andreasens warm, sympathetic illustrations glow with the hope and love that Mary finds in her new land.
