

Kristina: Tomorrow is the beginning of hundred new days

Kristina is in trouble. Deployed to Afghanistan as a non commissioned officer she has to leave her twins behind again and again. And then there is a mysterious accident. This is the story about a rather normal girl from the former German Democratic Republik, actually not a democratic place at all. She trained hard and won olympic medals for her country but nobody really cared. Joining the Army to escape from home would, to Grandmas opinion, turn her either into a spinster or a slut. Special agent Andreas doesn't believe in either and marries her. But when she falls pregnant he disappears. The question is, was it really the evil fairy who cursed Kristina as a baby in her crib so all the colours disappeared from her life?
