

Sisters of Charity, Catholic and Protestant, and the Communion of Labor (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from Sisters of Charity, Catholic and Protestant, and the Communion of Labor Florence Nightingale. If on this verse of mine Those eyes shall ever shine, Where to sore-wounded men have looked for life, Think not that for a rhyme, Nor yet to fit the time, I name thy name, - true victress in this strife! But let it serve to say That, when we kneel to pray, Prayers rise for thee thine ear shall never know; And that thy gallant deed, For God, and for our need, Is in all hearts, as deep as love can go. 'Tis good that thy name springs From two of Earth's fair things, - A stately city and a soft-voiced bird; 'Tis well that in all homes, When thy sweet story comes, And brave eyes fill - that pleasant sounds be heard. Oh voice! in night of fear, As night's bird, soft to hear, Oh great heart! raised like city on a hill; Oh watcher! worn and pale, Good Florence Nightingale, Thanks, loving thanks, for thy large work and will! England is glad of thee, - Christ for thy charity, Take thee to joy when hand and heart are still! Edwin Arnold.
