We'll review why each spot is a great place to retire, the local community, and general demographics of each region. Here is a preview of what is inside this book:

- Why Seniors Choose to Retire in Europe
- 12 Questions to Ask Yourself When Thinking About Retiring in Europe
- 15 Great Places to Retire in Europe
- Conclusion

An excerpt from the book: Berlin is situated within the enormous plains of northeastern Germany. Its rich history, notable culture and the infinite number of things you can do in this capital city of Germany make it an excellent place to retire. For a city that is the same size as Berlin, 3.502 million people is not a lot compared to other cities and because of that, your daily activities go by uninterrupted. Clean, green and spacious, its streets and parks are a favorite place for runners and cyclists. Berlin's move to stand out as both an economic hub and a city that promotes a greener environment are some of the things that tourists and retirees admire the most. There are moments when the city's buildings and infrastructures feel like they stand there as an accompaniment to the lush and colorful trees surrounding them. Another thing that retirees and tourists admire about Berlin is its approach when it comes to redirecting traffic and reinforcing the law. If you would spend even just one day in Berlin, you would notice how safe it is to be on the streets, and for a retiree, this can already be a primary selling point for the city. Owning a car in Berlin is not necessary, because its streets and roads are both pedestrian- and bicycle-friendly.
