

The Mechanics Institute Review: Issue 12: New stories from Birkbeck

Described by Paul McVeigh as A promise of whats to come for the short story Issue 12 of The Mechanics Institute Review features award-winning authors alongside the brightest new talent from Birkbecks celebrated MA Creative Writing. Booker judge Dame Marina Warner and her fellow Costa Award winner Zoe Gilbert lead the charge, with contributions from up-and-coming bestsellers Louise Lee and David Savill as well as a host of fresh new writers. Share a food critics worst nightmare, a haunting with a difference, a reluctant act of heroism, uncover the secret beneath the floorboards and the truth behind a mysterious illness. From African villages to Norwegian fjords these vibrant stories transport the reader across the globe and literary spectrum. With acclaim from the UKs hottest young writers Joe Dunthorne -.I will not be sharing them with my publisher. Theres enough competition. and Kerry Hudson -energetic and diverse; as full of intriguing characters as the city they were crafted in this collection will surprise and entertain. A great read for the busy commuter or budding writers who want to see how varied the short form can be.
